

Crippled British War Hero Breaks Engagement to Noted Prima Donna

War has ended the childhood romance of Maggie Teyte, grand opera prima donna, and Lieut. Seymour Robertson, British war hero.

The romance began "ever so long ago," when they played together in the Midlands of England, the district known as the Black country. Seymour was 7 years older than Maggie. She looked up to the boy. She was the "Teyte girl" to Seymour.

Then she went to a convent and later she was taken to the Royal College of Music in London. Sir Hubert Parry, director there, refused to teach her because she was too small and too young. So her father took her to Paris.

Jean de Reszke became her tutor. She created a new part in the opera circle and made a hit. She met Eugene Plummer. She says now she still loved Seymour when she grew to the prima donna, but the attention he paid her was her. She married Plummer.

She had a divorce. She never was really happy with him and finally obtained a divorce. He agreed to it in the meantime her voice had won her world fame.

Then the war broke out. Maggie was in America.

Word of Seymour's return came. She longed to know.

From friends back in the Midlands she heard he had gone to war with the 17th Infantry. He had been made a Lieutenant. Summer came with its flood of requests from American musicians to appear and sing for them. Kings of finance offered her their names—and their money.

All of these she refused. She sailed for England—across a sea dotted with submarines—to find Seymour.

England asked her to give her voice to the cause. With others she gave concerts at hospitals.

And then one day as she ended her song in a hospital a weak voice from a nearby bed called "Maggie." She turned and recognized Seymour. She couldn't make out at first, just how he was living. His form seemed so irregular under the cover of bandages and he had lost his left arm and right leg in battle.

It was she who proposed a few weeks later at his bedside. He accepted. Then she sailed for America.

They wrote to each other often, but Seymour seldom mentioned his condition.

The day Miss Teyte's season was to open in New York she received a letter from Seymour.

His friends had written that he had undergone an operation and that he probably never would be better.

Seymour's letter that he was waiting away. "I will not allow you to sacrifice your young life and your neighborhood to a poor human remnant," he wrote. "If you come back to England don't seek me. I'll be alone in my neighborhood. I'll be as I am. Proud? Maybe a little."

"But it's good-bye for all time. Go on with your work. Some day you will meet another chap you can love. Let or

SECRETLY BROUGHT NAME TO TANKS

Village Where War Monsters Were Built First Gave It Appellation.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 28.—Tanks, the great armored caterpillars that crept out over the battlefields of France and caused one of the war's most mysterious sensations, were given their name by the curious folk of a little town near London.

The story was brought to Texas by Lieut. P. E. Kinney, United States army reserve, who is recruiting for the tank corps.

The English war department was at work on a new weapon of offense in a small town near London and secrecy was of utmost importance. Guards were chosen from the tried men of the army and a light enclosure erected around the workshop. Neighbors were barred from the locality and curiosity reached the limit as the ponderous and automatic tilters, clanking of cranes and other noises gave evidence of the construction.

At that time the question of supplying water at the fighting fronts was an important one and the neighbors, including all of the army who knew that something was going on, decided that a new style tank was being built. Therefore the mystery was commonly referred to as the tanks.

When the first machine issued from the enclosure it did have a resemblance to a water tank. So it is as tanks that the armored cars have become known throughout the world.

The tank is an American idea. Lieut. Kinney said, although the first one was built in England by English mechanics. Without the knowledge of the other ally, France also was experimenting simultaneously with a machine of this kind. The smaller tanks proved much more mobile and were adopted generally by the allies.

RE CHARLIE.

In spite of his feet, his walk, his cantankerous, his cutaway coat, his trousers, his cane and his nifty scenarios, Charlie Chaplin is one of the greatest comedians in the world. His environment and props have not been able to entirely submerge his talent. Genius will out.

A New York broker swears he has never heard of the income tax. If he ever does hear of it he will be broken then ever.

The human fly was scaling one of the tall buildings the other day when a man in the crowd turned away impatiently. "I have a Ford that could do it in one-half the time," he said.

INSPIRATION.

Shakespeare used to tip the bottle, Byron loved the flowing bowl, Goldsmith used to wet his throat, Tom Hood used to flood his soul, Shelley wasn't an abstainer, Bobbie Burns was often tight, I hope would send a large container to the corner every night, Edgar Poe was oft convivial, He imagined many a crime, From some incident quite trivial, And then set it down in rhyme, If each great and bygone volunteer Got his pep from frequent rye, What d'ye expect from a futur columnist With the country going dry?

OLD FREIGHT ENGINE USED TO HEAT CAMP

GREAT LAKES, Ill., Oct. 28.—There are reported shortages of boilers in the country and in this connection it recently was found that more heat was necessary for the army than for the civilians. The army is using steam from a locomotive as a source of heat and the engine was brought forth and engine 675 of the Chicago & North Western railroad, which for 39 years hauled passenger coaches and freight cars, was leased for the purpose and is now stationed at Camp Grant. It is being used to heat the barracks.

Engineer Joseph Gulton, who spent nearly 40 years in railroad life and is in charge of old 675, said that he is enjoying the "softest" job of his long career. Relief is being back on freight trains shortly.

WISKEY FOUND IN BED.

SAYS "MURDER" JONES, RECENTLY CONVICTED IN SECOND CRIMINAL CASE ON CHARGE OF VIOLATING THE LIQUOR LAW, IS AGAIN TO FACE A SIMILAR CHARGE. Late Saturday afternoon Sheriff Perry and Deputies Dugan and Gowan made a surprise visit to Jones' room in the Hotel Cedar Grove. Several miles east of Cedar Grove, they found Jones in bed, and although Mrs. Jones protested against search of the bed because of his illness, the sheriff says he raised the mattress and found several bottles of whiskey beneath it. According to the sheriff, also revealed a number of whiskey bottles and corks about the house.

Jones was not brought to jail because of his illness. He claims he is a physician treating him for "flu."

HOLD WOMEN ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Chief Deputy Sheriff Jack Rocco and Deputy Ed Bradley Saturday afternoon at 5 p.m. arrested Mrs. Mary Elmore, on the Horn Lake road on the dikes Parkway, on a charge of violating the liquor law. Mrs. Elmore was taken into custody. They allege they found whiskey in her room. Elmore's place is as a saloon. Mrs. Josephine Bassi, on Jones avenue, was arrested Saturday night at 8 p.m. by Sheriff Perry and Deputies Dugan and Gowan, and charged with violating the four-mile law and the liquor law. The sheriff alleges that he got a negro to purchase liquor from her.
